What Local Hunters Should Be Informed On

Mokena Bulletin, Mokena, Ill. Gentlemen:

The 63rd General Assembly enacted a number of changes in our Illinois Game and Fish Codes.

Perhaps our local nimrods should be informed that it is now illegal to carry any fire arm on a public highway unless same be either enclosed in a gun case or be taken entirely apart, Section 46.

Minimum fine for violation is $25.00 and costs. This new rule applies specifically to the carrying of guns or rifles in automobiles.

Hunters neglecting to have license upon their persons are subject to minimum fines of $25. in each violation of Sec. 77.

The minimum fine for trespass is $25.00. This penalty also applies to the hunter whose dog is allowed on the wrong side of the fence, Pheasants may not be shot excepting in flight.

Violations of our State Game Code may result in confiscation of firearms used and also in cancellation of State Licenses to hunt. Clarence M. Cleveland.

Bremen Twp. Ration Board Headquarters Are Burglarized

The Bremen Township Ration Board headquarters at 4033 W. 147 St., Midlothian were burglarized Monday night. The following statement has been released to The Tinley Park Times by R. H. Hodgman, Member of the Ration Board regarding the robbery:

Bremen Ration Board located at 4033 West 147th Street, Midlothian, Ill. was broken into and robbed sometime Monday evening, November 1st. Due to our policy of never having more than a days supply of coupons and certificates on hand, the loss was very small.

We have for sometime in the past and will continue in the future to keep all coupons and certificates in excess of one days supply at the local bank vault from which same will be transported to the local ration board as needed under an armed guard. In fact in the future, what few coupons and certificates may be left at the end of the days work, will not be left in the Ration Board as in the past but will be deposited in a safe over night.

While as yet, the guilty parties have not been apprehended, there is very little doubt that they will be as they left several clues behind them which the state police and the FBI are following up. We hope in the very near future to be able to advise you of their capture.

We, the members of the board, regret very much the inconvenience this has put a great many of you to as it has been necessary to close the board the last two days to the public in order to take an inventory so as to furnish the OPA with the numbers of each and every book stolen.

War Price and Rationing Board, 31-1, Midlothian, Ill.

Mokena Blood Donors Help Swell Record Total

Mokena blood donors helped to run a record total of 1900 pints of blood collected during the ten days the Mobile unit was in Joliet.

At the time of going to press the Joliet office have not sent a complete list of 1st and 2nd time donors, therefore this will be published later.

The committee wishes to thank every one who volunteered to donate their blood, the officers of the bank for their co-operation, the women who worked in the bank and those who provided transportation for donors to and from Joliet.

Many donors from Mokena and surrounding territory were glad to greet Miss "Happy" Bruder as the nurse in charge of the unit and as usual she made more friends in this area by her thoughtfulness and kindness to the blood donors.

On Oct. 25 a Mobile unit set up at Stateville and during 5 days collected 1159 pints of blood donated by the inmates. A record was set one day when 309 pints was taken. This is the largest amount collected by any Mobile unit in one day, and all of us that were fortunate enough to have been working over there are proud of this achievement.

It was a pleasure to give these men the opportunity to serve their country, in this manner and they were so grateful many more hundreds volunteered, but the time was too short to take them, therefore another will be going back both to Stateville and the old prison in the near future.

The Red Cross is grateful for the splendid record made in both banks and want all donors from Mokena and surrounding area to realize that it could not have been accomplished if they hadn't volunteered to donate their blood to help our fighting men throughout the world.

TINLEY BOARD OF EDUCATION SPONSORING TEEN AGE DANCES

The Board of Education of the Tinley Park School is sponsoring teen-age dances each Friday evening in the school gym. This project was undertaken in an effort to provide entertainment for the young people of the Community.

The dances began three weeks ago with a committee of high school students planning each dance. There is no admission charge and music is furnished by the use of phonograph records. Those in attendance donate whatever they wish for the purchase of new records. Each person is required to register with the committee upon entering the Gymnasium for their first dance. At each succeeding dance they present admission cards signed by their parents. The dances begin at eight o'clock and end at eleven o'clock.

Refreshments are served at each dance. Ladies of the PTA prepare these refreshments and any profit that results from the sale of these refreshments is turned over to the treasurer of the young people's group for the purchase of new records.

A Hallowe'en dance was the attraction on October 29 with a crowd of about seventy young people attending. Plans for the future include special dances at which time an orchestra will furnish the music. All young people in the community are welcome to attend these dances. The committee consists of Joy Berg, Lois Wallin, Elaine Lewis, Lorraine Cupp, Gene Swanson, Douglas Aden and Ted Roth. Anyone interested may join this committee in their planning of future dances.

Mary Jane Bickley Former Mokena Resident Dies

Mrs. Mary Jane Bickley, 87, died Thursday evening at the Manteno hospital where she had been a patient for one week. She was in ill health for some time, and for the past ten years lived in Mokena. Mrs. Bickley was born at Sandusky, Ohio the daughter of John and Mary Spears Copley, natives of Scotland. She married William Nelson Bickley in 1878 at Philo, Ill. having spent the earlier part of her life near Manteno. Mr. Bickley, a farmer died in 1914. Survivors are three sons, Ernest of Tucson, Ariz., Glen of Lindstrom Minn.; James of Frankfort; a daughter Katherine of Cincinnati, thirteen grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted in the home of her son James Bickley Sunday afternoon with the Rev. Erich Bizer, pastor of St. Peter's Ev. church, Frankfort, officiating. Burial was made at the Scheer Cemetery, Frankfort.

REP. LOTTIE O'NIEL ADDRESSES TINLEY WOMANS CLUB

The International Relations Department of the Tinley Park Womens Club Mrs. L. G. Bruder, chairman, had charge of the meeting when they met last Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Wm. Semmler in Mokena. A large number of members and friends were present.

Mrs. Bruder presented Mrs. David Gray of Ivanhoe, Ill. who has lived for many years in Australia and whose family still live there. Mrs. Gray was most interesting as she took her listeners back to the years when Australia was discovered and told many incidents pertaining to that country establishing itself in the world of nations. A description was given of how England, her mother country, peopled Australia by sending her prisoners there to live, how it would take 10 months to make that trip in those early days, with the prisoners chained to the bottom of the ship, with one hour free each day, and when they finally arrived in Australia, because of filth, little and poor food and no sanitary conditions typhoid fever prevailed which went with the prisoners when they landed on the new country where they then received their freedom, but just for a little while as most of them died with the disease, but not before they had infected that wonderful new country with typhoid.

Australia waxed rich in the early period of their history when whale and seal hunting brought in over $60,000 in a year. Next they went into sheep raising which was done on a very large scale, some sheep ranches being 10,000 square miles. And then gold was discovered there and that era ran true to form as in our country, being a period of wild and woolly action. And when that was overcome they settled down and evolved an ideal democracy.

Another speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill of Downers Grove, Ill. our State Representative who spoke on the responsibility members of Womens Clubs have in making their decisions about the many serious questions confronting our country now. Mrs. O'Neill mentioned that Mr. Churchill in one of his public speeches said, that he was talking for England, but so far no one has come forward and said they were talking for the United States and that is needed very much right now.

At the business meeting preceding the program, Mrs. Brown Campbell, president, presided and much detailed business was transacted. The club decided to take part in the Educational Week program of the Tinley Park school Nov. 7 to 13. A collection was taken among the members and $2.00 was collected for a contribution for a party for Servicemen which the district will give Nov. 28 in Chicago.

It was decided that each member would bring a 35c gift to the November meeting for a Christmas gift for the girls in the Illinois House at the Park Ridge School for Girls.

Mrs. A. Panknin, music chairman led the group in singing and also gave a short history of each song. Guests present were: From the Frankfort Womens Club: Mrs. James Bickley, president, Mrs. Frank Kohlhaugen, Mrs. W. Hedges, Mrs. Raymond Hiroshige, Mrs. Herbert Folkers and Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht, and Mrs. August Pfleger and Mrs. John Martin from Mokena. Mrs. Emilie Campbell of Seattle, Wash. and Mrs. Hugh Deadmore of Joliet, sisters of Mrs. Semmler, were also present.

Tea and coffee were served in the dining room from a table covered with a lace table spread, with silver service and yellow chrysanthemums arranged in a leaf container. Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. O'Neill poured.

Don Janes Was Former Student of Orland School

The horrors and sorrows of war have been brought very near to Orland Park this week with the receipt of the sad news that Pfc. Alva Don Janes of Orland Park has been reported as "missing in action on Sept. 19." This news was received by his father, Mr. Francis L. Janes of Mattoon, Ill., in an official communication from the War Department and was relayed to his sister Mrs. Lloyd Calhoun, with whom Don had made his home in Orland Park.

Don was one of the first of the boys from this village to go into service, being inducted by the local board on June 19, 1941. He had been stationed in North Africa for over a year and his last letters to his friends in Orland Park stated that he had been driving a "jeep" in connection with a battalion of combat infantry and inferred that he expected to go into action in a very short time.

While the official notification did not state as to where the action in which he was reported as missing occurred, it is surmised that he was part of the Italian expeditionary force.

The parents, relatives and friends of Don are hoping and praying that supplementary news may bring information that he is safe, or is at the worst, a prisoner or in some isolated army hospital.

VFW Brings Armistice Message

The Wm. Martin Post 725 VFW of Mokena in conjunction with a group of business firms of Mokena and New Lenox are sponsoring a vital VFW message for Armistice Day in this issue which every citizen should read and ponder on.

PLANNING ENTERTAINMENT

Watch for the time and place of a big entertainment coming to Mokena. This show is being sponsored by the Wm. Martin Post 725 VFW and their Auxiliary. The entertainers will be Soldiers from the 732nd division at Camp DesPlaines. This is a show the whole family will enjoy, so watch for the date.

TINLEY PARK SCHOOL TO OBSERVE NATIONAL EDUCATIONAL WEEK

The Tinley Park school will celebrate the opening of National Education Week by holding an Assembly in the school auditorium, Monday, November 6 at 11 a.m. Dwight L. Green, Governor of Illinois, will speak to the boys and girls of the state, by radio, as he officially opens the week's activities.

Throughout the week the doors of the school will be open to visitors from nine to three-thirty. Parents are urged to spend as much time as possible in the glass room where their child spends five and one-half hours per day and one hundred eighty-five days per year.

On the door of each class room visitors will find the program for the day so the mother with more than one child, and with limited time may choose the work she wishes to observe. As nearly as possible work will be carried on in the regular manner and visitors are asked to help promote this by conferring with teachers at some other more convenient time.

The weeks activities will be climaxed on Friday evening. From 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock teachers will be in the class rooms and parents may meet them there. Fathers will find this a convenient time to visit school. Each child will have work displayed on his desk and his parents are asked to write a note of appreciation or suggestion to the child for him to find when he returns to his desk the following Monday.

At 8:30 spirited community singing will call visitors to the Auditorium. "Education for Victory" will be the theme of the interesting program which will follow. Many organizations of the community will participate. Highlights of the evening include a beautiful ceremony of the Posting of Colors by the American Legion, the American Legion Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary, and Womens Benefit Association; and a group of musical numbers by the Zion Lutheran Church choir directed by Mrs. Mel Rensink. The 4-H clubs will exhibit the results of their summer's work.

The public is invited, Friday, November 12, 8:30 p.m.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Those extra unused paper doilies will stay clean and wrinkle-proof if rolled up and placed inside a mailing tube. Tie paper or cloth over each end.

Dates filled with cheese, nuts or peanut butter make a good sweet to top off lunch. Serve them with crackers.

Do not allow cover crops in the vegetable garden to attain too much top growth before digging under, as then decomposition is often very slow.

For a different flavor, substitute brown for white sugar in bread pudding.

Save all old leather from high-top shoes for mending leather gloves, mittens, overshoes. It is soft and pliable.

So you may always know right where to find a spool of thread when you want it, take a board one inch thick, four inches wide, and five to six inches long. Drive seven-penny nails through the board every two inches. Then file off points of nails and keep your thimble and spools of thread on the resulting spindles.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

To maintain the nation's essential motor transportation system, the American rubber tire industry will be called upon to make 30 million synthetic passenger car tires in 1944. The synthetic rubber program is being geared to permit such an output without hindering the military needs for rubber.

More than 65 per cent of the war materials reaching factories in Michigan travel on rubber-tired trucks, and 67 per cent of the finished products move out by truck. Proof that our national economy is closely bound with rubber.

Hundreds Die Daily in India Famine

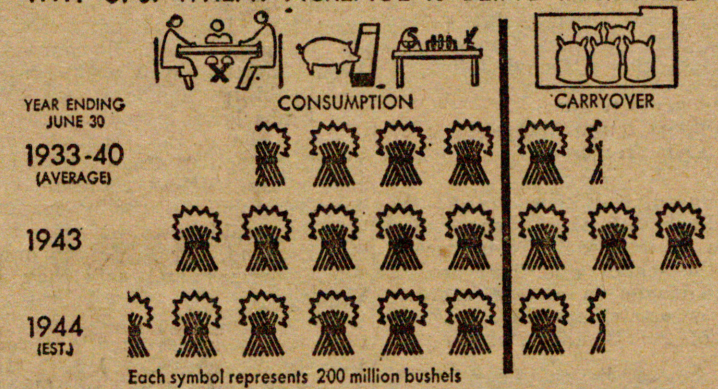

A dying Indian family is pictured on the streets of Calcutta where 250 persons perished daily in the worst famine to strike India for decades. This scene was typical of the condition in India as appeals were made for Allied assistance in the form of "mercy ships" bearing food. The famine was reported to have killed 25,000 in Bengal within four months.

MAGNETIC TORPEDO:

Here is one reason why we needed the Azores so badly as an anti-submarine base. The U-boats not only have new devices but also a new strategy and may converge around the bottleneck to the Mediterranean between the Azores and Gibraltar.

DEVICES:

Latest Nazi torpedoes are superior to the former type which exploded only on contact. New torpedoes are exploded (1) on contact; (2) by magnetic attraction on coming close to the steel hull; (3) by the vibration of the engines of the ship under attack. This makes it possible for the submarine to succeed in its mission much more frequently than before. A torpedo is much less likely to miss, since missing actual contact with the target does not now mean, as previously, that it misses the target.

STRATEGY:

Convoys have now discovered that Nazi subs are hunting in packs of sufficient number to employ the same sort of naval strategy which large units of naval vessels are able to use. A group of submarines will surface on one side of the convoy, and thus decoy the escort vessels in that direction. Meantime, another group of submarines on the other side of the convoy will approach within easy firing range and discharge their torpedoes.

Observers believe, however, that the main artery of commerce from the United States to the European theater of war—the North Atlantic run—is still so well guarded that the submarine menace is licked so far as that run is concerned. It is feared, however, that the Nazis will now strike at another vulnerable point, namely, the Straits of Gibraltar. Since these straits must be passed by all Allied merchant shipping supplying the Mediterranean theater of war, including North Africa, Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica, Italy and the Adriatic—not to mention all the shipping now passing through the Mediterranean bound for the Straits of Suez and India—this area is due for a concentrated submarine attack.

A VISIT WITH STALIN

Secretary Hull might have got some interesting pointers for his Moscow trip from Cuban Ambassador Conchoso, only Latin American diplomat who has met Stalin.

Brilliant Senor Conchoso is both Cuban ambassador to the U.S.A. and Cuban minister to Soviet Russia. Recently he came back from a visit to the Soviet capital during which he presented his credentials to Foreign Minister Molotov, and expressed the polite hope that he might also call upon Stalin. Knowing that Stalin was one of the busiest men in the world, however, Conchoso did not press the point and actually did not expect to see him.

So he almost fell out of his ballet seat one night when someone tapped him on the shoulder and told him that Stalin would see him in 20 minutes. How Stalin knew the Cuban diplomat was enjoying the famous Moscow Ballet, Conchoso did not know.

However, he was told that a motor would call for him at the theater in 15 minutes, and he should be ready. Conchoso consulted a British diplomat, also present at the ballet, who told him that the man who had tapped him on the shoulder was the Russian chief of protocol, so he had better be ready.

It was May, but zero weather in Moscow. However, Ambassador Conchoso did not find it cold in the Kremlin. (Churchill wore a zipper suit when he called on Stalin, and Mrs. Hull has been worrying on behalf of her husband about the cold in the Kremlin.) Only two officers guarded Stalin. One officer met the Cuban at the entrance of the building and escorted him to Stalin's office. There he was met by another officer who took him the rest of the way. There was no pomp or ceremony.

GENIAL JOSEPH

Stalin himself was not fierce, but kindly and genial. His eyes, according to Ambassador Conchoso, are deep and penetrating, but with wrinkles of humor in the corners.

The Soviet premier seemed surprisingly well-posted on Cuban problems, knew something about its labor laws and its economic questions. However, he was not familiar with Cuban - U. S. relations and seemed to think that Cuba was still politically dependent on the U.S.A. The ambassador explained that the Platt amendment had been abrogated and Cuba now enjoyed complete freedom.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Capt. Ralph Ingersoll, drafted away from his editorship of the newspaper PM, was detailed by the army to help pilot the Five Flying Senators on part of their war-zone trip. It is reported that Ingersoll is being queried by the war department as to who leaked certain information to the senators. Gov. Matt Neeley of West Virginia, former U. S. senator, will run for the house of representatives in the First West Virginia congressional district.

Resourceful Student Had Ready Proof for the Prof

The student was one of those lads short on knowledge, but long—oh, so long—on resourcefulness. For many minutes the professor had been plying him with questions in an effort to break down his colossal self-assurance.

"You have heard of cause and effect?" the professor finally inquired.

"Oh, yes," the student replied.

"Have you heard of effect coming before cause?"

"Indeed, yes," was the reply.

With an ill-concealed look of triumph, the professor demanded, "Give me an example!"

"A barrow wheeled by a man."

Kidneys Must Work Well

For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at night, swelling.
Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

BLACK SOMBRERO

by CLIFFORD KNIGHT

Elsa Chatfield, Hollywood artist, is cut off from the will of her Aunt Kitty, who died from an overdose of morphine. Barry, an amateur detective, and Hunt Rogers, a professional sleuth, go to Mazatlan, Mexico, on a yacht cruise with Margaret and Dwight Nichols. Arriving at Mazatlan they find that Elsa and her party have preceded them by plane. They dine at the rancho of Elsa's father, Sam Chatfield, whom Rogers questions about his visit to his sister, Kitty, on the night she died. The next day Chatfield tosses a rotogravure section into the sea, but the pieces are picked up by Reed Barton, who gives them to Rogers. Chatfield is very indignant over the incident.

CHAPTER VI

"Here it is," said Dwight, pointing. "Yes," said Rogers. I leaned farther forward to see the picture. It was a reproduction of a photograph of Elsa; the lovely personality shone up from the damp surface. Unmistakably it was Elsa at her provocative, impish best. That, of course, was as it should be; but the staggering, incomprehensible part of it all was the child on her lap. A child apparently about a year old, seeming normally healthy and lovely, and, like all babies, a captivator of the heart. Underneath the picture were the lines: "Elsa Chatfield, whose caricatures have recently won wide acclaim, and her small daughter Mary Frances."

"Well—that's that, I guess." "Yes," said Rogers, picking up the torn sheet, and starting below to his stateroom.

"Barry—" he began. "I—I don't understand it."

"Neither do I, Reed." There were many things in that strange story not understood until the end. The cruise in the Orizaba planned for that day was abandoned; the yacht lay idly at her anchor. There was no fishing.

"What do you make of it, Dwight?" I inquired after lunch that day. Dwight Nichols shook his head.

"The whole thing is impossible. The child has been dead now several years—three or four."

"But how could such a mistake be made?" asked Margaret, her dark eyes very earnest.

"Mistakes can usually be explained," Rogers reminded her. "I dare say George Rumble, to whom we must look for the answer, has a very natural explanation. That, of course, is aside from other aspects of the thing. Here's a family secret closely guarded for years, about which neither Elsa nor her father would talk, broadcast to the public."

"Did Sam Chatfield see the picture?" Margaret interrupted.

Rogers shook his head. "I have it in my stateroom. Exhibit A, so to speak, although there are literally thousands of them in existence elsewhere. In Southern California, however; not here in Mazatlan."

But it was not until the morning of the following day that we ran across George Rumble. We discovered him in the last place we expected to find him—at Sam Chatfield's rancho, sitting idly in the patio indifferent to the little green parakeets screaming in the gnarled old pepper tree overhead while he waited for Elsa. The shirt of pink and white checks was absent, but in its place was a companion of blue and white.

"Some of us have been wondering where you got that picture of Elsa and the baby," said Rogers.

"I knew somebody would ask that. Well"—his dark little eyes watched the movements of a young Indian girl as she came out of a doorway, walked straight and slim through the patio and disappeared into the kitchen—"there's lots of ways to get a picture."

"Elsa didn't give it to you."

"No."

"You understand, Rumble," I began, "there's only one conclusion to be drawn, after seeing how Elsa reacted yesterday when she saw the picture in the paper."

"Well—draw it, Barry, if you want to. If I say anything to Elsa about what I'm going to do, she won't let me. She'll be going against her own best interests by telling me I can't do it. When you start with a press agent, you ought to leave it all in his hands. Elsa'd be just like her aunt—the one that died. She'd said to me: 'No, you can't do that. You can't do this. I know what I want in the paper.' So I said to her one day: 'Why'n heck did you hire me, if you're going to run it?' That made her mad and she kicked me out of her house, and I never did get my money, either."

Neither Rogers nor I said anything for a moment as we reflected upon this revelation.

"You knew Elsa's aunt—Katherine Chatfield?"

"I'll say I knew her. She was a hell-cat and no mistake. She was the first job I have in California when I came out from New York. I heard they were putting on some sort of campaign in Pasadena; she is the chairman. I go to see her and she says okeh, and we start to work. But we start fighting, too, right from the start. I don't get my money and I go to see her about it. I tell her I'm going to sue her and that night she dies. That's the first time I ever saw the picture of Elsa and the baby, when we're setting one day at the old gal's desk looking up some stuff she wants to give me. The next time I see it I pick it up in Elsa's apartment in Hollywood when I am planning my campaign for Elsa, the names are on the back: Elsa and Mary Frances."

"How did you know it was her daughter?" asked Rogers.

"Her aunt told me that first time when I saw the picture. I asked who it was. That's why I remember it a year later when I can use the picture, see?"

"Didn't you know that the child was dead?"

"Dead? The baby?" Rumble echoed, slightly aghast. "No, I didn't know that. It ain't none of my business where the baby is, understand, and I don't ask. All I'm looking for is something with heart interest, see? Dead," he mused. "Well—that gives me an idea; we can correct that. I'll get the boys at the office in Los Angeles to run a little piece—you know, unfortunate mistake; picture of brilliant young caricaturist published last week with child—Say, that's fine! We'll crack 'em again. I tell you it don't make no difference what you run, so long as you keep hammering away at it." Rumble's thoughts were busy with future publicity, while Rogers sat

Elsa seemed to be flying for her life.

with a curious look in his mild blue eyes regarding this strange member of that great and honored body of men who direct a nation's thought and whim.

"You say that Katherine Chatfield died that night after you threatened to sue her for your money?" asked Rogers.

"Yes. I don't call till after dinner, see? This guy—Elsa's poppa—and his Mexican wife arrived while I was still talking with the old gal in her study. They don't know me now, but I don't forget people. The Chatfield woman gets sore as heck when they come in, and jumps up and slams the door. I thought she was going to have a stroke. Maybe I'd have got my money out of her, if she hadn't been so mad when she sees them out in the hall."

"Do you know anything about the death of Miss Chatfield?"

"What do you mean, Hunt?"

"I mean do you know of what, or how she died?"

"I don't know anything, except what I read in the papers the next day. They said it was suicide. Why?"

"Has it ever occurred to you that it might have been murder?" For a long moment George Rumble gazed at Rogers without speaking. Rogers added: "When did you leave the house that night?"

"About nine o'clock."

"She was alive then?"

"What are you getting at?"

"The woman was murdered; can you tell us anything about it?"

"I didn't do it. I left her still alive. There wasn't any reason for me to kill her. She owed me money, and we had a row, and I threatened to sue, and she tried to kick me out, and I says: 'No you don't, old girl; there ain't no woman going to kick me out of any house. I'm a gentleman and I'll walk out like one.'"

We fell silent for a few minutes while overhead in the old pepper tree the little green parakeets scolded and shrilled.

"I wish you could help us out about that night, George," observed Rogers casually.

"I wish I could too, Hunt."

"Did anything arouse your suspicions while you were there; anything that would lead you to believe that Miss Chatfield was about to be murdered?"

"No-o. I guess not. You see it's a year and a half, almost, since that happened; and the thing I remember, of course, is the row I had with her."

Conversation lagged; we had exhausted all that was obvious in the affair.

"Do you know where Elsa is?" Rogers inquired of a sudden.

"All I know is that some guy—a Mex, who speaks English—said when I first came out that she had gone out horseback riding."

"Alone?"

"I didn't ask."

We had had our talk with George Rumble; the explanation of the picture in the rotogravure section had been made, and I was ready to return to town. But Rogers was inclined to linger, although we had discovered that neither Sam Chatfield nor Berta was at home and there seemed no object in remaining.

"You don't know, of course, when Elsa is expected back?" inquired Rogers of Rumble.

"No, I don't, Hunt."

Rogers got up from the patio bench and began a leisurely examination of the flowers and the riot of tropical shrubbery. Finally he pushed open an old gridded gate which led to a gravelled courtyard, or bare plaza. The huge house formed one side of the open square. A long low line of adobe buildings with barred windows housed the office of the ranch and the storehouses, a third side was the living quarters of the ranch workers, the fourth that of the stables.

I followed Rogers, leaving Rumble sitting alone, smoking a brown paper cigarette in solitude. As we sauntered toward the stables, the actions of a man in the courtyard, near a gate which opened upon the fields of the rancho, drew our attention. He was stooping above the form of a brown dog lying on the ground. As we drew near he emptied the contents of a bottle upon a dirty rag and held it to the dog's nose, and the dog quivered slightly as if from a chill.

"The dog is old," said Rogers in Spanish.

"Very old, sir," the man replied, looking up sadly. "It is best that he should die now, sir." He caught a whiff of something and turned his head away.

"Chloroform," I said to Rogers.

"Yes," he answered, and stooped to pick up the empty bottle the man had discarded. "He'll die quickly," he said to the executioner.

"Yes, sir. Senora Chatfield would not have him shot. She said this was merciful."

"The senora gave you the drug?"

"Yes, sir. Do you think the dog is dead, sir?"

"Not yet, but soon."

While I was standing there, gazing at this odd scene, my ears picked up the sound of hoof beats. For a moment or two their source was not apparent. I walked through the gate and out into the open away from the stables. Rogers followed me. Across the wide fields along an unpaved ranch roadway leading to the house, came pounding a horse and rider as if in a tremendous hurry to arrive. A hundred yards or so behind was a second horseman following in the wake of the other.

As they came nearer in their mad race, I made out the figure of Elsa astride the leading horse, and on the other Chesebro. Elsa seemed to be flying for her life; she was leaning far over the neck of her mount and applying a short quirt in vicious mechanical strokes, her arm rising and falling as if geared to the flying hoofs of her horse.

They drew rapidly toward us. Elsa, looking back over her shoulder, of a sudden sat erect and reined in her horse. There was something very intent about her every action. She had not discovered us, standing as we were beside the huge wheel of an old oxcart. She was intent upon Chesebro now reining up at her side. She sat quietly astride her horse which, with heaving flanks, was uneasy and nervous after the run.

Rogers grunted half in astonishment at something, half in warning to me; he seemed to sense what was about to happen. For there was something deadly in Elsa's firmly seated figure, in the way she held herself in readiness. Chesebro's restless horse sidled close to Elsa's. Chesebro's hand was extended as if in expostulation, in protest, in appeal to an iron something in Elsa.

It was all too apparent now that Elsa had not so much been flying for her life as running away from a situation that had angered her, and had now thought better of it and was decided upon action. That action was so swift, so startling and so cruel that I gasped, scarcely able as I was to follow the figure that stiffened in the stirrups, the arm that rose and fell like lightning.

The lash of the short quirt which Elsa only a few moments before had used upon her horse struck Chesebro across the face. I still remember the sound of it, can see the white line it left along his fat cheek. Elsa's horse reared. She clung to the saddle without touching the pommel, so intent was she upon the object of her wrath. Chesebro's horse whirled about, but didn't bolt; the man was dazed, bewildered by the blow.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

THE SACREDNESS OF HUMAN LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:13; Matthew 5:21-28, 33-35. GOLDEN TEXT—Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer.—I John 3:15.

Human life is sacred—and there is a very important reason why that is true. It is not because of any law of man, but finds its foundation in the fact that God created man in His own likeness and image. Because that is true, no man has any right to take the life of another for any cause except at the direct command of God. Only by the orderly process of law for the protection of society and in accordance with the Word of God may there be any such action by man toward man.

Both of these truths are declared in Scripture in God's covenant with Noah (Gen. 9:5, 6), which was made possibly a thousand years before the Ten Commandments were given to Moses.

One cannot deny that human life is held rather cheaply in many places today. War helps to create that attitude on the part of nations which makes them count boys and girls, yes, mere babies, as "war material."

But not only in war is life carelessly destroyed. We decry the "slaughter of innocents" on the highway, unnecessary death in industry, yes, even in the home.

I. The Prohibition of Murder (Exod. 20:13).

The word "kill" in this commandment is one which means a violent and unauthorized taking of life, and is therefore more properly translated "murder."

Not all killing is murder. A man may kill another entirely accidentally, or he may be the duly constituted legal officer carrying out the law of the land in taking the life of one who has forfeited his right to live because he has slain another.

There is also the right of self-defense, be it individual or collective as in war. But these are the only exceptions; let us not attempt to justify any other.

Murder is more prevalent than most of us suppose. Some years ago we were told that there was a murder every forty minutes in our land. With the general increase of crime, and of drunkenness (which so often incites murder), the current figures would probably show an increase.

Do not forget the deaths, the destruction of life, by avoidable automobile accidents. Some of these were really murder because the one responsible drove with defective brakes, dangerous tires, or while he was intoxicated. Add to these the deaths in industry caused by failure to provide proper safeguards or healthy working conditions, and by the exploitation of child labor, and we say that we should cry aloud, "Thou shalt do no murder."

II. The Provocation to Murder (Matt. 5:21, 22).

Murder finds its provoking cause in the heart of man. Our Lord was concerned about correcting the desires rather than to apprehend the offender after the act had been committed. It is the better way, and the more effective one.

In this matter of murder, Jesus cut right through the outward aspects of the matter and pointed out that an angry hatred in the heart is the root of all murder. If we hate, we have murder in our hearts. Circumstances may hinder its fulfillment, but the danger is always there until we remove the cause.

Just being angry—calling our brother "raca" (the modern equivalent of which is "nobody there"), and calling him "thou fool," which classifies him as "morally worthless"—these are the three dreadful downward steps to murder. And they begin in anger.

May God help those of us who have strong feelings that we may not yield them to the devil in such anger against our brother!

III. The Prevention of Murder (Matt. 5:23-26, 33-35).

Prevention with God means more than putting up a barrier to keep us from killing. He deals with the heart, and thus puts the whole life right. It is not even a question of how we may feel against our brother. If he has aught against us we are to do all we can to win him. He may be unreasonable, grasping, and unfair. However, the spirit that will win him is not that of retaliation or sullen submission to the inevitable, but rather a free and willing going even beyond what is required.

It is clear from other scriptures that our Lord does not mean that wicked and unscrupulous men are to be permitted to defraud and destroy God's people. At the same time, we must be careful not to explain away the heart of our Lord's interpretation of this great commandment.

We who believe in Christ are to be in deed as well as word the sons of our heavenly Father (v. 45), loving not only those who are kind to us, but even our enemies.

438 Required to Guard 3,000 Prisoners of War

While war prisoners in internment camps in the United States serve one another as barbers, tailors, cooks and cobblers, and also do much to conduct their own affairs, a typical camp housing 3,000 of these men requires three Police Escort guard companies, or a total of 438 officers and enlisted men of the army, to supervise and guard it.

CARD OF THANKS

I desire to thank all our friends, neighbors and the Tinley Park Fire Department for helping to extinguish the fire at my home last Thursday.

L. V. BACON

The Ladies Aid of the Zion Lutheran church held their monthly meeting last Wednesday afternoon.
The meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. Wagner. Officers for the coming year were elected. Re-elected were Mrs. Wagner, president; Mrs. Wm. Keuch, vice president; Mrs. Curlin, secretary and Mrs. Henry Klepper, as Treasurer. The ladies were honored by two guests Mrs. Kuch and Mrs. M. Goebel.

In the program following the meeting a beautiful poem was read by Mrs. Curlin and the lovely hymn "Now Thank We all Our God" was sung.

Delicious home made cake and coffee was served by Mrs. Wm.
Schonebeck, Mrs. Fred Goebel, Mrs.
Stelter, Mrs. Rooker.

Mrs. Wm. Lanfrusti, Pub. chair.

Pvt. Paul Nielsen of Ft. Knox,
Ky. spent the weekend at his home.
Mrs. Elaine Shluter has been spending the past three weeks with her husband, Pfc. Harry Schluter at Miami Beach, Florida. She is expected home next week.

A quiet fall wedding was solemnized October 28 at 3:30 o'clock in the Tinley Park Methodist church, when Charlotte Porter and Fred Wiles both of Chicago, were united in marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dini of Tinley were the attendants.
Rev. R. J. L. McKelvey, pastor of the church, officiated.

Lt. Marianne Moss spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Moss, having a 36 hour leave from her post at the Station hospital, Camp Grant. She wore the Nurses new Olive Drab uniform.

A board meeting of the Tinley Park Woman's Club was held at the home of Mrs. R. Hannum Tuesday.
Mrs. E. A. Moss celebrated her birthday last Thursday by entertaining friends and relatives. Cards were played after which lunch was served. Congratulations Leila.

A very "spooky" party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fulton Sunday evening, when they entertained many relatives and friends at a good old fashioned Halloween party. Dim lights and Ghosts greeted you, after which many of the old games were enjoyed.

Word was received last Wednesday
by Rev. and Mrs. Henry Meyer, from their son Pfc. Marvin Meyer, that he has landed safely somewhere in India. He states he is 15,000 miles from the US coast, that the food is very good and that he is in the best of health. This is the first word from Marvin in three months.

nounced by Frank T. Corcoran, District Manager, Office of Defense Transportation.

The functions of the committee will be to study the dairy farm transportation situation in the county and make any adjustments necessary to conserve truck mileage and equipment.

The committee appointed and the interests represented are:
Otto C. Schilling and Henry G.
Henke, Tinley Park, producers; Clarence Bettenhausen, Tinley Park, and George Waldvogel, Frankfort, haul-ers; Elston Oranger, Orland Park and Rudy Freeberg, Tinley Park, broccersors.

Corcoran said anyone affected by the proposed program has an opportunity to file objections to the representation of their interest on this committee. Objections should be made in writing within ten days of this notification to the Office of Defense Transportation, 209 S. Wells, Street, Chicago, Illinois together with the name of substitute committeemen of their choice and the method of selection.

There were quite a few Tinley people who attended the Thornton
High school Fun Fair last Friday night and report it was a fine success.

Friends and relatives met at the station last Monday to wave to ley on his way to his base at San Diego, Cal.

The Association of A Century of Progress in Horticulture will hold their semi-annual breakfast Reunion November 11 at 11:00 a.m. in Carson Pierie's Tea room, Chicago.
Mrs. Fred Nichols if Blue Island is chairman of the program while Mrs.
Wallace B. Combs is president of the organization.

Mrs. Fred Willman Sr. underwent an operation October 23 at Engels Memorial hospital, Harvey. She is recovering nicely and thanks all her friends for the lovely cards and flowers she received.

Dear Friends:
I received your gift and it was well appreciated. I also get the Tin-ley Park Times. Everything is okay here. The training is really good. Its good to read about friends back home. It makes you feel better to find out what's going on back in your own home town.

Well I don't have much to write about, all I wanted to do was to write and leave you know that I got it and how pleased I was to receive it. It really is a swell kit. It's something that's really useful. So thank you very much. I really appreciate it.

Good bye and thanks again.

Dear Friends:
About a month ago I was pleasantly surprised to receive the fine servicemen's kit you sent me and must say that it has come in handy on many occasions.

Most of all though, what I'd like to relay is my sincere thanks for your thoughtfulness to me. And I want you to know that I appreciate it very much, even though this acknowledgement may be belated. How ever we have been pretty busy with the business of becoming good soldiers, so I hope you'll excuse me for not writing sooner. In closing accept my gratitude for your kindness in remembering me.

Fifty members of the Youth Fellowship of the Frankfort and Green Garden Methodist churches and of St. Peter's Ev. church enjoyed a Halloween party at the Frankfort Methodist church parlors Wednesday evening. Fortunes were told and relays, group and folk games were played under the supervision of the Misses Betty and Wilma Mark. Refreshments were served by the Frankfort Y F who were the hosts.

Mrs. Wm. Semmler of Mokena entertained the Tinley Park Woman's Club at her home last Wednesday afternoon and invited the following members of the Frankfort Woman's Club: Mrs. James Bickley, Mrs. Herbert Folkers, Mrs. W. V. Hedges, Mrs. Raymond Hiroshige, Mrs. Frank Kohlhaugen and Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht. The guest speaker was Mrs. David Gray of Ivanhoe, and formerly of Australia. Her talk on Australia was both educational and entertaining. Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neil, State Representative also addressed the group, who with Mrs. Emilie Campbell of Seattle, Washington, Mrs. Semmler's sister, presided at the tea and coffee service.

Mrs. Ed. Warning and Mrs. Kate Lankenau recently visited with Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Lankenau at Ann Harbor, Mich.

The regular monthly meeting of the Frankfort Fire Department was held Tuesday evening at the village hall. Besides the routine business it was announced by president George Sangmeister that the committee had mailed three cartons of cigarettes to each soldier stationed overseas and a gift card with an enclosure of $2.00 to the remainder of the boys listed on the Frankfort honor roll.

Members of the fire department will hold a social meeting Tuesday December 7, to which their wives will be invited.

Editor News-Bulletin
Mokena, Ill.

Dear Sir:

I have been receiving copies of the News-Bulletin quite often and you can be certain that I surely enjoy reading it very much. I surely thank you for your kindness and thoughtfulness.

I can not tell you the exact location I am in at this time. Previous to coming to my present location I was stationed in North Africa, Pantelleria and Sicily, have experienced a few bombing raids which are not at all pleasing to anyone and something I will never forget.

The most interesting was a dog fight over one of our airdromes during one of our days in Africa. Again I took it to be an air show not realizing that our fighting pilots were there risking their lives to keep these planes from harming us on the ground.

All in all, you can now bet that we have broken all 100 dash records fox hole or slit trench.

Sincerely,
George L. Baughan, T-Sgt. Air Corps, 6761001, 60th Fighter Sq. 33rd F. Gp. APO Box No. 525, care Postmaster, New York.

Oct. 10, 1943

Dear Mr. Semmler:

It has been some time that I have written to you, but haven't forgotten you.

The only reason I haven't written any sooner was that I had a furlough. I started out by plane to the mainland which was a very nice trip. At a height of over twelve thousand it is a thrill looking down at good Old Mother Earth. It sure is a good way to cover a number of miles in a short time. After being in the jungle for a time. It seems that speed is what counts when you have your furlough paper in your hand.

After spending a few days in a certain city visiting friends old and new.

The transportation from here on was by train. It sure was slow according to the plane ride. After traveling several thousand miles I reached the place where my furlough was to start. Sure had a grand time. The people that I had met over a year ago gave me the same welcome as when I first met them. As I left they told me to be sure to drop in any time and pay them a visit.

The total number of miles that I traveled by plane, train and by boat was a little better than fifty five hundred miles. This was covered from July 6 to Sept. 20.

The weather was nice most of the time I was on furlough. This furlough is something that I shall never forget. Seen some beautiful scenery and had the time to enjoy every bit of it.

The biggest surprise of all and a happy moment of my life ever since I have been over seas was when a Buddy walked up and said isn't your name Lühring? I turned around and couldn't place him at first. But after talking for a few minutes he told me that he was Mike Roberts from Mokena. He then told me that someone from home had written to him, that I was near him. But never expected him to be as close to me as he was. So the old saying "It isn't such a big World after all" really holds true.

Up to now I have received six copies of the News-Bulletin. I sure enjoy reading it.

I thank you very much for sending it to me. It sure is hot here now so I will enclose all the heat I can just in case it is cool there when you receive this letter.

I am in the very best of health. At this time I wish to say Hello to everyone. It is time for lights out. So I will close.

Yours truly,

Lloyd Lühring.

Cpl. Lloyd P. Lühring, 36013327, 3481st Ord. (MM) Co. Q, APO 503, care postmaster San Francisco, Cal.

Roger and Alan Hedges, twin sons of Dr. and Mrs. W. V. Hedges celebrated their thirteenth birthday at a dinner in their honor at the Hedges home Tuesday evening October 26. Guests were Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Hiroshige Frank, and George Folkers and Dick Lambrecht.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Folkers observed their fifteenth wedding anniversary Wednesday, October 27. Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Howard Morse of Joliet entertained in their honor. The date also marked the eighth birthday of their daughter Janet.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Klier was baptized Sunday afternoon at the Klier home. He was named Wayne Wilbur. Rev. Herman Meyer of the Zion Evangelical church of Matteson officiated. Later a dinner was served to a large number of relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sangmeister are the parents of a daughter born Sunday October 24 at Silver Cross hospital, Joliet. Mrs. Sangmeister before her marriage was Marie Wille of Tinley Park.

A pot luck supper was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Christianson Tuesday evening in honor of G. Salmen who left Monday for service in the SeaBees. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lester Heisner and family and Mr. and Mrs. Don Swinford and family. The Salmens have given up their apartment in the Folkers house.

Members of the Always Faithful class of the Green Garden Methodist Church held a Hobo party at the church Friday evening and entertained members of their families as guests. A buffet luncheon was served and the Hard Times theme was carried out. Games provided entertainment.

Mrs. Emory Bettenhausen was hostess to the members of the Young Women's Circle of the Green Garden Methodist church in her home Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Eisenbrandt entertained Thursday evening Oct. 28 in honor of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Reiter who were celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary. Guests were from Lockport, Joliet, Peotone and Frankfort. Bingo was played and luncheon was served at midnight. It was also Mr. and Mrs. Eisenbrandt's 18th wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht and son Dick were dinner guests of Dr. and Mrs. W. Schmaeckel of Matteson, Sunday evening.

MOKENA, ILL.

DIAL—MOKENA 2171

We know ... because we fought for the same thing back in 1917-18.

Some folks are trying to tell us you are fighting this war only for the chance to come back to a country that appreciates modern plumbing and knows how to make real ice cream ... where you can stuff yourself with hot dogs ... corn on the cob ... and thick, juicy steaks from corn-fed steers ... They would have us believe you lie awake nights praying for that juke box in the corner drug store at home ... and a girl friend who squeals with delight when a hot band gets in the groove.

There's nothing wrong with pretty girls, hot dogs and swing bands. We yearned for 'em, too! But we veterans of yesterday know soldiers don't talk much about what they feel inside.

We think you're fighting this war for a luxury more precious than personal comforts ... the luxury of knowing that neither your kid brothers at home ... nor maybe your own kids 25 years from now ... will be forced to face the risks and frightfulness of another World War.

We're not trying to tell you this is another of those "wars to end wars." But you must agree we've got a great chance to give the buck-toothed Japs and the goose-stepping Nazis a lesson they won't forget for a couple of hundred years.

We're pretty sure that's what you're really fighting for ... a peace legacy for your kids and other people's kids ... and that you don't want to come home until the job's done.

That's why we members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States are trying to back you up 100 per cent. Not only with our efforts on the home front ... buying bonds, building planes, making munitions and saving scrap ... but in making sure that America will be the kind of country you want it to be when you get back.

That sounds like a big order but we're happy to report that we're making progress. Our government is already pledged to give your disabled comrades, and their dependents, the same pension, compensation and hospital benefits which have been available to veterans of other wars.

We have asked Congress to give you some folding money when you're ready to come home ... at least enough to buy some civilian clothes and maybe let you loaf a few weeks. Maybe six months' pay or even more.

On top of this, things are being done to make sure you will have the security of a steady job after the war ... an opportunity to use your energy and ambition to better yourself if you have what it takes in guts and common sense.

We have a hunch that's your idea of freedom from fear and want ... and it's our idea, too.

That's the idea which has made America great and strong in the past. It's bound to do the same in the future.

We salute you ... we who represent America's overseas veterans of other wars ... for the glorious deeds you have already accomplished on the fields of battle.

You are making us doubly proud of the Service Ribbons we earned the right to wear as overseas veterans in the wars of yesterday.

We know your courage makes you unbeatable. We know that you will finish the job we tackled in the first World War ... with honor and glory to yourself and to the Flag that leads you to victory.

Good luck ... and God bless you!

Dear Friends:

I am writing to thank you with all my heart of my appreciation for the birthday greeting, and for the very nice box of candy. The candy traveled across the states a couple of times before reaching up to me as it was sent to the address where I was a year ago. I finished my final squadron flight training here, and was designated naval aviation pilot the first day of October. I hope to be able to stop over in New Lenox to see my very good friends Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Walker, and hope to see you people also, if I come up that way in my new assignment.

My pals wish to send along their hearty approval of that good candy too. Thanking you again and again.

Sincerely,

H. W. Mullins, AP 1st class, USN Enlisten Flight Batt. Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla.

Dear Friends:

I would like to take this opportunity to express my thanks and appreciation for the swell box of candy that the New Lenox Service Club sent me on my birthday. You know it really makes us fellows in the service feel good to know that the people back home are in there pitching for us and whether we are one hundred or one thousand miles from home it doesn't make any difference, because we are all in this fighting for the same cause, and in my mind that is the most important thing about it. Well, I guess that I have said enough for this time, so it will be so long for now.

T Sgt. Max Harding, Hq. Det. POW camp, Clinton, Miss.

Behind the scenes of shell production

In this modern war production plant 37 mm. steel cartridge cases are being turned out in vast quantities with the aid of efficient electrical operations.

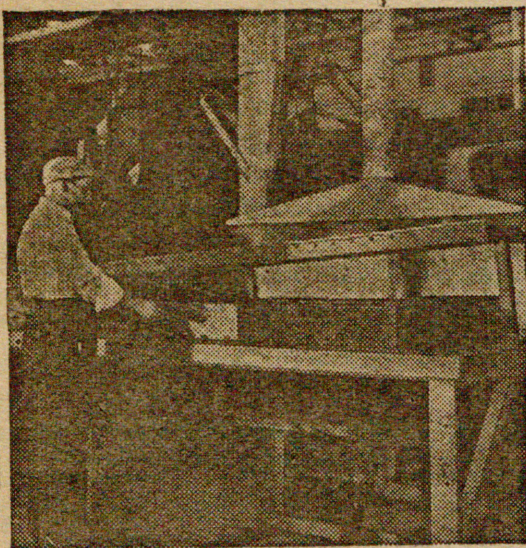

Electric conveyors provide a steady flow of parts and a progression movement through the various steps of processing. The draws (stretching operations) are made in huge electrically operated presses. The annealing is done in an accurately controlled continuous electric furnace; conveyorized salt bath and conveyor type oven. The finish is applied by an automatic spray machine and is baked in an infra-red oven.

In this war plant, just as in thousands of others throughout Northern Illinois, Electric Power is the vital source of energy... the dynamic force that puts more production into every hour.

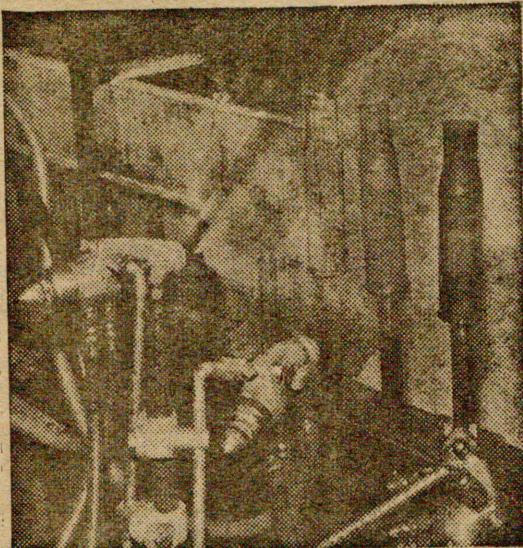

Electric Power Speeds War Production

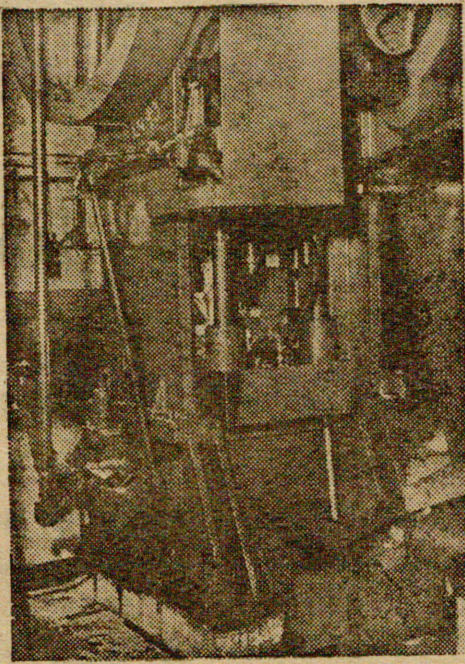

Because of its compactness, efficiency and ease of operation, the infra-red battery of lamps is used in baking the finish on shell casings. Casings have been removed from the foreground to show the calorods which heat the bottom of the shells.

The small, thick cups have been annealed in the controlled atmosphere furnace and are ready for the first draw (stretching process). They'll roll down to the presses at the rear.

Casings move past the spray guns, placed so that each casing is covered completely. Here one has been covered and others are entering the spray.

Draws are made in these big electrically driven presses. Drawn shells are pushed up to the conveyor by a hydraulic ram, and the conveyor carries them to the wash and furnace.

Internal spraying is the function of this electrical machine. The girl puts the shell over the revolving tube and the paint sprays into it. She does two at a time.

Electricity has gone to war — don't waste it!

Dear Mr. Semmler:

Just received a Bulletin this evening. Grand feeling to read the home town events. Sort of makes a fellow homesick in a way picturing these things going on and not being near. Even though the articles were a couple months old it was fun reading them. Don't believe I missed a word from the top of the first down to the bottom of the last page. Incidentally I'd like to give you my most recent address. May help the Bulletin to get to me a little faster.

Arty Hqs. APO 33, care Postmaster, San Francisco, Cal. Your Bulletin has had a hard time catching up to me but thanks to the U. S. Postal service agencies it always manages to make it. You see since I've left I've called a number of places "home." By the way Belated Congratulations on your quarter of a Century mark.

Yours truly,
Gordon A. Osmus, of New Lenox.

THOUGH the tumult and the turmoil of this year's world series is well over, they still turn back to the odd season preceding it.

And a good part of the talk concerns the pitching records from the two leagues — records that were somewhat unusual in the number of 20-game winners.

As a rule, 20-game winners are scarcer than winners at a race track after the day is over.

The star pitcher of the year, without any question, was Spurgeon "Spud" Chandler of the Yankees—with 20 victories against only 4 defeats, an unearned record below 1.70, for the first time since 1919. That happens to be 24 years ago.

But now the argument boils up and over to the pitcher in second place.

This argument is not so easy to settle in what you might call a jiffy.

Here are some of the leaders:

1. Spud Chandler, Yankees, 20-4.
2. Morton Cooper, Cardinals, 21-5.
3. Rip Sewell, Pirates, 21-9.
4. Dizzy Trout, Tigers, 20-12.
5. Elmer Riddle, Cincinnati, 21-11.

These all belong to the 20-game winning list. This doesn't make them the best five pitchers.

For there's a fellow by the name of Whit Wyatt of the Dodgers who developed a sore arm and a sore leg and a few other sore ligaments. I know Leo Durocher counted on Wyatt for at least 22 games. But after all his ills and ailments had laid him low, Wyatt came back to win 10 straight. In condition, Wyatt, even with a third place club, could have turned in from 20 to 25 victories.

Mort Cooper's record with a club that ran away with the pennant doesn't quite rate with Rip Sewell, Elmer Riddle or Dizzy Trout. They had no Cardinals around them. But Mort's record in having a pair of 20-game years—1942 and 1943—shows a greater consistency than most of the others. Big Mort is out there winning his share.

Other pitchers who had big seasons include: Shoun of Cincinnati, 17-7; Brazie, St. Louis, 18-10; Murphy, Yankees, 17-5; Smith, Cleveland, 16-6; Haefer, Washington, 17-3; Lanier, Cardinals, 16-2; not forgetting Wyatt, Dodgers, 17-3.

World Series Nerves

Pitchers react differently to the tension of the series. For example, Spud Chandler, who looks calmer than the surface of a summer lake, is always highly keyed up, a bundle of nerves that call for stout control.

In fact one of Chandler's few weak spots is that in the past, he has tried to put more on the ball than any one arm could deliver.

"I used to think Spud was trying to knock off my glove," Bill Dickey once told me.

Bill Johnson, while a rookie, seems to have little trouble curbing nerves. Bill is as keen to win as any one else, but he is the type that can even take a first world series in his stride without bothering too much. Few rookies ever get the idea that a world series game is just another ball game.

The calmest and most confident pitcher I've ever seen in any world series was Dizzy Dean.

I recall the day he was warming up in Detroit to face the Tigers. Some one came up and said the odds were 9 to 5 on the Cardinals for the opening game.

"Them gamblers is sure smart people," Dizzy said with a broad grin. "They know a sure thing when they see it."

Dizzy actually wanted to pitch that entire series. I was talking about this with Ole Diz a while ago. "I didn't figure I could win four in a row," he said, "but I sure figured I could win four out of five."

They are still wondering how many ballplayers will be left for 1944.

The general feeling is that few playing this summer will be on hand for any spring practice.

With the fathers' draft already in operation, most of those still left will be called at some early date.

It is possible that there will be enough left who have been deferred to start the 1944 campaign.

But there won't be so many of these. It is believed that over 80 per cent of those in this last series will be in uniform before mid-winter.

The same goes for pro football. The long arm of the draft has already begun to lift stars from several teams and there are sure to be many changes before the season ends in December.

There will be enough left to finish out the season. The fall campaign of 1944 is too far away to launch any predictions in that direction.

Changes and shifts may be even more vital in the college whirl.

When such men as Bertelli are called into active service through naval graduation, the blow won't fall lightly on any football coach.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

JUST a year ago baseball fans were plagued by numerous fears that they had seen their last World Series for the duration. The draft status of big league ball players was an unknown factor. Washington had done little to indicate an awareness of such an activity as baseball.

The most strident of the calamity howlers forecast an early and abrupt end to the game. Both leagues would fold up before the season got well under way. The public wouldn't stand for healthy, well-conditioned men playing baseball while other men risked their lives and their futures in defense of their country.

Then, too, many gloomier individuals believed that the caliber of play would be lowered to such an extent that the cash customers would stay away in droves. DiMaggio, Feller, Greenberg and other stars of the first magnitude had gone into service. Could baseball survive such a shock?

False Argument

The latter argument was completely spurious. Baseball has managed to survive its natural losses. Didn't Babe Ruth mean as much to baseball as Joe DiMaggio? Didn't Lou Gehrig mean as much as Bob Feller or Hank Greenberg? The shock of their loss was cushioned because it was inevitable, but the final results were similar. Baseball would be in a sorry state if its fate depended on the destinies of a few widely publicized players.

Even now there are quite a few baseball followers who moan sadly of the coming year. Things look no better to them than they did last year. In truth, they look worse.

The drafting of fathers has brought acute confusion to the faint of heart who already are worrying about the 1944 World Series. They might do well to save their tears for the minor leagues—they'll probably need more sympathy than the majors.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball commissioner, and William Harridge and Ford Frick, presidents of the major circuits, are quite confident the league organizations will function again next year. They know there will be new difficulties, that it may be necessary to lower the player limit and that there will be a vastly greater percentage of manpower losses.

And it isn't at all unlikely that, in order to keep the main show alive, the minors will have to function on a tighter basis than at any time in their history. It used to be a source of strength of the minors that they were included in major chain store systems. Now it becomes the source of their greatest danger.

Possibilities

Major clubs will draw from their farm clubs even if it should weaken them completely. At its worst it could mean the suspension of the International and Pacific Coast leagues and the American association. At its best it's likely to mean that those leagues will be using men who definitely are not up to standard.

Baseball men have been slow in attempting to clarify their standing. But there are signs that they want action. There is said to be growing revolt against Judge Landis' order that nobody connected with the majors may contact anybody in official Washington about any matter connected with baseball.

Baseball has been the subject of many unfair attacks in the past months. The other side of the story should be told. Club owners, managers and other officials are too intelligent to expect any undue consideration. They are looking for no more than workers in any other industry.

Instinct Leads Them To 'Greenest Grass'

That "the grass is greener on the other side of the fence" for the cow is more than bovine fancy.

When the cow will risk injury from barbed wire in order to get out on the highway or into another field for the grass on the other side, surely there must be some compelling force responsible, Dr. William A. Albrecht, chairman of the department of soils, University of Missouri, asserts.

"Perhaps farmers have never thought that animal instinct and soil fertility are at the basis of what may be wrongly considered just so much 'crazy cow' psychology," said Dr. Albrecht. "In this adage about animal behavior, there is given to us a significant suggestion for making our shortage of labor more effective and the farm business more profitable. Recent soil studies using animals as means of measuring soil fertility are pointing out that animal choices represent more effective gains by them, better animal health, along with more regular and more prolific reproduction."

"Lime treatments on the soil, for example, are the areas commonly selected when cows graze lespedeza in one part of the field in preference to another, as numerous farmers testify. Hogs acted similarly toward corn left in the field. The corn was left untouched where no lime was used even though the hogs passed to and fro through it. Barley has been grazed out first where 200 pounds of fertilizer was applied in contrast to that with only 100 pounds. Grains, such as corn, in the self-feeder, have been selected by hogs according to the soil treatment where the crop was grown. Guinea pigs have selected various grains with differences in choice according to the fertility of the soils growing them.

"Yes, 'the other side of the fence' is sought by the animal because its better judgment as to its nourishment, and therefore its better health, better growth, and more efficient reproduction are involved. The cows usually break out on to the highway or railroad right-of-way where crops have grown annually but have not been removed. Crops have not carried away the soil fertility. We have been alarmed about the danger that some valuable meat or milk producer might be killed by traffic. Instead, we should be recognizing the fact that by means of the more fertile soil on the other side of the fence our efforts and the animal's time can be used more effectively."

"The cows have been pleading with us to give soil improvement some needed attention but we have turned them a deaf ear. We may well profit by using these animal assays of our soil fertility as well as by calling on the chemist for soil tests."

"How can we best accomplish the job of soil replenishment? There are a number of ways. Liming is beneficial because it helps both the plants and the animals to get their needed calcium, more than because this soil treatment fights soil acidity. Calcium in limestone, or even in gypsum, phosphorus in the acid, or raw rock forms; potassium as salts; and all the other nutrient elements included on the soil fertility list, need our attention as soil treatments to make the grass greener on our own side of the fence."

Closet Accessories As 'Different' Gifts

IF YOU want to make a gift that really is different, try a door pocket planned for special needs. Notice the laundry bag flat against the wall on a hanger with a pocket for handkerchiefs and fine things. Also the shelf covers of bright oilcloth with prepared edging as a finish. The dimensions in the sketch will give you ideas for remodeling your own closet. Allowance is made for long dresses and deep hat boxes, giving space for at least one extra storage shelf above.

NOTE: There is no further need to be without enough closet space. Mrs. Spears has prepared a sheet 17 by 22 inches containing step-by-step illustrations and directions for making the most unique and efficient closet you ever saw. There are a dozen or more places in almost every house where this type of closet may be built, in any size and depth from twelve inches or more. Send for Pattern No. 256 to:

Songs Canned

Since 1928, the Archives of American Folk Song in the Library of Congress have made and preserved recordings of more than 25,000 old songs created by and characteristic of various cultural groups of this country, among them being cowboys, "hillbillies," Indians, Creoles and Negroes.

From an old French word "mes" derived from the Latin word "misus" meaning a course at a meal, comes the Army's name "mess" for its breakfast, dinner and supper. Favorite meal with the soldier is chicken dinner—his favorite cigarette, Camel. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) A carton of Camels, by the way, is a gift that's always welcome. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

Ice Follies

The fabulous Ice Follies of 1944, coming to the Chicago Arena Friday night, Nov. 5, for a limited engagement lasting through Saturday night, Nov. 20, surpasses all seven previous editions of the famed Shipstads and Johnson revue in the magnitude of production, calibre of artists, brilliancy of costumes, originality of music and showmanship and splendor of decor and lighting.

Performances of the Follies will be presented nightly at 8:30 at the Arena, located on McClurg Court between Erie and Ontario Streets, with matinees at 2:30 on Sundays, Nov. 7 and 14 and Saturdays, Nov. 13 and 20. Tickets for all performances are now on sale at the Arena, and the Hub, State and Jackson and mail orders are being accepted at the Arena. The opening night has been taken over by the Service Club of Chicago as a benefit.

The Ice Follies of 1944 which features a cast of 138 in 33 beautiful numbers, some of them breathtaking production scenes, combines the beauty and gaiety of old France; the color and glamour of the race track; rural comedy and a spectacle in fantasy of the Orient. These and many more original showmanship conceptions of the Messrs. Shipstads and Johnson are enacted by a galaxy of the world's greatest skaters in clean and beautiful entertainment extraordinary.

Among the notable names returning in the cast are Eddie Shipstad and Oscar Johnson, nationally famous comedians, Roy Shipstad, the world's smoothest skater, Heinie Brock, diminutive comedian, Betty Atkinson, the "girl with the million dollar legs", Norah McCarthy, radiant Irish-Canadian champion, Frick and Frack, the eccentric comedy sensations, Osborne Colson and Fran Claudet, Papez and Zwack, the "International stylists", the Vanity Fair Trio, Phyllis Legg and Bobby Blake. Newcomers include petite Hazel Franklin, English skating wonder, and Michael Kirby of Canada. Others in the production, in addition to the 70 lovely "Ice Follies", are Rugsy Maxson, the Miltons; Thomas Twins Helen Brad; the Roberts, Jeanne Sook and many others renowned in their own right.

Outstanding production numbers are Candyland, Reflections on the Water, Derby Day, Oriental Fantasy, 18th Century Garden, Crazy Quilt Circus and Precision in Plaid. It can truthfully be said "Ice Follies of 1944" reaches the pinnacle of ice musical productions.
